This week at School

Wow, wow, wow, what a week!

This week has been such a busy week, where children have learnt about:

- different careers and challenged the stereotype of blue jobs and pink jobs
- heard from different employers about what jobs look like
- how volunteering can help to support our personal development
- have learnt about significant people in history who have challenged and made history.

This week, our Foundation children have been very busy learning about our local area. They have walked to our local library to register for a library card and then visited our church to learn about its position in our village.

This week, our year 4 children also visited Murton Park where they learnt about the life as a Roman. They got to dress up in their Roman clothing and then how to fight and defend as a Roman soldier.

Pink Jobs- Blue Jobs

As mentioned above, this week our children have been learning about different careers. On Thursday, they came dressed as their career aspirations- it was incredible to see such a diverse representation of careers. We have set up an aspirations tree at lower with many of their careers shared.

Throughout the week, the children have also been learning about a significant person in history and how they have challenged stereotypes to create a better world. On Friday, the children then visited a different year group to share their learning about this person.

The significant people learnt have been:

Nursery- Ada Lovelace (mathematician)

FSB- Amelia Earhart (pilot)

FSK- David Attenborough (conservationist)

IC- Frida Kahlo (artist)

IG- David Bowie (musician)

20- Emmeline Pankhurst (activist)

2F- Rose Parks (activist)

3T- Andy Warhol (artist)

30- Mary Anning (geologist)

4H- Elvis Presley (musician)

4LM- Malala Yousafzai (activist)

5GL- Chris Hoy (olympian)

5H Stevie Wonder (musician)

6M- Albert Einstein (scientist)

6J- Gloria Steinem (activist)
